In Scientific American

Following on the book excerpt the other day in Salon, I'm pretty tickled to have one today in the venerable Scientific American. Do You Accept the Science of Climate Change? is how they've titled my excerpt on the disinformation campaign fueled, as it were, by certain special interests, how the media has played it, and how the scientific community has fought back. By the way, if for some reason you haven't sampled the excellent coverage on Energy and Sustainability that Scientific American has on offer, please do yourself a favor and subscribe to their feed. Better yet, subscribe to the magazine itself. A good bit of the reason for SciAm's superb coverage is attributable to their world-class writer and editor David Biello.
